DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

1. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

2. Claims 1-5 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Toshinori et al.

Toshinori et al discloses a voltage control apparatus for a vehicle generator comprising an input terminal for inputting a voltage of a battery 5 through an inanition switch 3, a light emitting element 4 connected in series with said ignition switch, a rotor coil 21, a resistor 143 for limiting a current flowing through light emitting element disposed between an element within said voltage control apparatus and input terminal. Also, the light emitting element is coupled through ignition switch to a base terminal of a NPN transistor 14.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

3. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

4. Claims 6-8 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Toshinori et al in view of ordinary skill in the art.

The applicant discloses that the light emitting element is a diode.

Toshinori et al discloses the claimed invention except for using a light emitting diode for the light emitting element. It would have been an obvious matter of design choice to use light emitting diode, since applicant has not disclosed that the light emitting diode solves any stated problem or is for any particular purpose and it appears that the invention would perform equally well with a light emitting lamp.

Response to Arguments

5. Applicant's arguments filed 8/13/01 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive. In regards to the transistor 14 not affecting the light emitting element, anyone with ordinary skill in the art would know that in an electronic circuit, the elements in the design can affect the whole circuit (e.g. if a transistor fails, the whole circuit is affected), thus the transistor 14 is able to drive/affect, indirectly, the light emitting element. Moreover, anyone with ordinary skill in the art knows that resistors are used to limit voltage/current, thus a resistor between the light emitting element and within another element of the control apparatus would eventually limit the current/voltage. Also, It should be emphasized that "apparatus claims must be structurally distinguishable from the prior art." MPEP 2114. In re Danly, 263 F. 2d 844, 847, 120 USPQ 528, 531 (CCPA 1959) it was held that apparatus claims must be distinguished from prior art in terms of structure rather than function. In Hewlett-Packard Co v Bausch & Lomb Inc., 909 F.2d 1464, 1469, 15 USPQ2d 1525, 1528 (Fed. Cir. 1990), the court held that: "Apparatus claims cover what a device is, not what it does." (emphases in original). To emphasize the point further, the court added: "An invention need not operate differently than the prior art to be patentable, but need only be different" (emphases in original).

That is, in an apparatus claim, if a prior art structure discloses all of the structural elements in the claim, as well as their relative juxtaposition, then it reads on the claim, regardless of whether or not the function for which the prior art structure was intended is the same as that of the claimed invention.

Conclusion

6. THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the mailing date of this final action.
